SENATE PREPARES TO PASS THE FARM AID BILL

HOUSE STARTS 2ND DAY DEBATE ON TARIFF BILL

SENATE LEADERS WILL NOT REOPEN FIGHT ON DEBENTURE CLAUSE

VOTE NOT CHANGED BY REACTION ON ORIGINAL 47 TO 44 DECISION

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, May 10. — (UP) — In a chamber warmed by tense political sentiments, the senate prepared to pass the farm bill today while the house started the second day of debate on the tariff.

A telephone suggestion came from the White House to the senate today asking administration leaders to seek another vote on the debenture amendment objectionable to President Hoover. After canvassing the situation the leaders decided they would not, for several reasons, reopen the fight in which they were defeated Wednesday.

Their check showed not a vote had been changed by reaction from the original 47 to 44 decision to retain the plan. In addition they found considerable intensity of feeling over the letter of Senator Fess of Ohio criticizing what he called "the pseudo-republicans" who voted against the president.

Even with the debenture included, the bill is expected to pass by a safe margin, and thereafter be sent back to the house. A cold reception awaits it there.

Originally, house leaders intended to refuse to accept the bill, because the debenture amendment was included in it, and they reasoned the debenture was a revenue measure which should originate in the house.

The Fess letter, sent to an Ohio constituent, criticizing all republicans who voted for the debenture, drew immediate replies in statements, requested by newspapermen, from the three senators specifically mentioned—Borah of Idaho, Nye of North Dakota and Brookhart of Iowa.

Contending the debenture plan is no more a bounty to the farmers than the tariff is to the industrials and that the republican party always has been willing to forego collection of tariff money to help an industry, Borah said:

"Mr. Fess hastens with impatient pride to devote all kinds of bounty in the way of high duties to manufacturing interests but recoils with pseudo-pride from extending the same principle to the producers."

Nye said: "Some day Ohio republicans will learn that North Dakota republicans are striving to have a little closer line laid to Lincoln than is the case in Ohio, and with that realization will come new life for a party whihc has been growing so stale it forgets that people can make and break parties."

"I don't abandon Hoover," said Brookhart, "I merely stuck to my own campaign promises. I made my speeches in earnest and not to get into office."

Leaders say there is no intention of chastising those who voted for the debenture, and they intend to keep the present discussion about the Fess letter from the floor, if they can.

GOVERNOR CHRISTIANSON MAKES THIRD APPEAL

St. Paul, May 10.—Hard upon his messages to President Herbert Hoover and Dr. Hubert Work, republican leader, Governor Theodore Christianson late Thursday dispatched a third message to Nicholas Longworth, speaker of the house, which asked for the passage of a tariff bill in congress which would "meet the needs of agriculture."

The telegram stated in part:

"The people of the northwest see in the impending tariff bill another effort on the part of industry to prevent agriculture from securing the equality to which it is entitled and which it must have to insure a return of prosperity.

"I would urge you to use your great influence to secure the adoption of such rules of procedure as would make it possible to amend the bill to make it meet more adequately the needs of agriculture."

Nine of the leading agricultural organizations of the state previously had sent similar requests to Washington.

Madison, Wis., May 10.—A resolution memorializing congress to pass the farm debenture bill was made before the Wisconsin assembly today, having passed the senate by a 20 to 9 vote.

TERRIFIC BLAST AT SO. HANOVER WRECKS PLANT

BELIEVED MANY PERSONS WERE KILLED AT FIREWORKS CO. FACTORY

75 TO 100 PEOPLE WERE WORKING AT PLACE WHEN ACCIDENT OCCURRED

Brockton, Mass., May 10—(UP)—A terrific explosion at 2:20 P. M. today was reported to have wrecked the plant of the National Fireworks Company at South Hanover, 13 miles from here.

Early reports indicated that many persons might have been killed or injured, but authoritative information was not immediately available.

Although the plant is 13 miles from Brockton, the explosion was heard in some of the outlying sections of this city.

Telephone reports received here stated that the territory between Brockton and South Hanover was rocked by the blast as though by a small earthquake.

Aid was rushed from this city.

Reports received here stated that the National Fireworks plant had begun work on its Fourth of July orders and was operating with virtually a full complement of employes.

It was estimated that 75 to 100 persons were working at the plant at the time of the blast.

The plant consists of several small cement and wooden structures and covers a considerable area.

A newspaper correspondent at South Hanover telephoned the office of the Brockton Enterprise at 2:45 P. M. that the explosion had occurred in the power mill of the plant and that the building had been completely wrecked.

The correspondent stated there evidently had been several fatalities.

Fire which followed the blast was still raging at the hour, making it impossible to determine the extent of the disaster.

West Hanover, Mass., May 10. — Two men were known to have lost their lives, two more were believed dead, and several fellow employes were more or less seriously injured when an explosion demolished the powder mill at the National Fireworks Company's plant here late today.

A static spark was believed to have caused the blast, which damaged three other buildings and imperilled the lives of between 35 and 40 men.

The bodies of a man named Perry and another worker named Knight, both horribly mangled, were taken from the debris about 45 minutes after the explosion.

The other two men who were thought to have perished were believed to have been working with them in the power mill.

The two men most seriously affected by the fumes—Charles Ney, 29, and James Carlisle, 35—were under treatment at hospitals here.

The blast occurred soon after the navy dirigible Los Angeles, on a test flight, had passed over the plant. The fact that a number of workmen had gone outside to watch the airship, held down the list of those overcome.

The correspondent stated there evidently had been several fatalities.

Fire which followed the blast was still raging at the hour, making it impossible to determine the extent of the disaster.

West Hanover, Mass., May 10. — Two men were known to have lost their lives, two more were believed dead, and several fellow employes were more or less seriously injured when an explosion demolished the powder mill at the National Fireworks Company's plant here late today.

A static spark was believed to have caused the blast, which damaged three other buildings and imperilled the lives of between 35 and 40 men.

The bodies of a man named Perry and another worker named Knight, both horribly mangled, were taken from the debris about 45 minutes after the explosion.

The other two men who were thought to have perished were believed to have been working with them in the power mill.

The two men most seriously affected by the fumes—Charles Ney, 29, and James Carlisle, 35—were under treatment at hospitals here.

The blast occurred soon after the navy dirigible Los Angeles, on a test flight, had passed over the plant. The fact that a number of workmen had gone outside to watch the airship, held down the list of those overcome.

LARGE NAPTHA TANK EXPLODES DURING FIRE

Bayonne, N. J., May 10.—A tank containing 1,500 gallons of naptha exploded during a fire at the can filling and shipping departmet of the Vacuum Oil Company in the lower section of Bayonne today, scattering blazing oil over four other large tanks and setting them afire.

L. V. Van Leuven, general manager of the company, estimated the damage at $50,000.

CHLORINE GAS TANK EXPLOSION

Syracuse, N. Y., May 10.—Residents of the suburbs of Solvay and Liverpool fled their homes today when a tank containing several thousand cubic feet of chlorine gas exploded at the Solvay process company's plant near here.

One man was dead and more than fifteen others were under treatment. James Carlisle, 35, died in a hospital here. Another workman, Chas. Ney, 29, was pronounced in a serious condition.

The fumes, similar to those which were used in the world war, spread

"His Captive Woman"

Fine shades of character drawing, against a colorful background and a story that is compelling and convincing, characterize "His Captive Woman," the picture now showing at the Lyceum theatre.

George Fitzmaurice, who produced and directed the film, has a reputation for color and romantic accomplishment in his pictures. And he has infused these plentifully into the dramatic tale of a girl hunted for murder, her sojourn on a desert island with the officer sent to bring her back, their rescue and return for trial.

"His Captive Woman"

Fine shades of character drawing, against a colorful background and a story that is compelling and convincing, characterize "His Captive Woman," the picture now showing at the Lyceum theatre.

George Fitzmaurice, who produced and directed the film, has a reputation for color and romantic accomplishment in his pictures. And he has infused these plentifully into the dramatic tale of a girl hunted for murder, her sojourn on a desert island with the officer sent to bring her back, their rescue and return for trial.

CITY'S LONGEST RESIDENT DIES

Mrs. Mary Ann Murphy Claimed by Death at Noon Today at Age of 80 Years

RESIDENT FOR 56 YEARS

Came Here When Tents Dotted the Townsite; Leaves Five Sons, Three Daughters

Active up to last Sunday, infirmities of old age today claimed Brainerd's longest resident, Mrs. Mary Ann Callan Murphy, widow of John Murphy.

Death came to the 80 year-old lady who had spent 56 years of her life in this city, at noon at the home of her son, James F. Murphy, 320 North Ninth Street.

Possibly without exception no resident now lives who has seen the growth of Brainerd from its infancy as did Mrs. Murphy.

She came to this city in the so-called early days, traveling with her husband who died on December 13, 1916, by stage, settling in this city when tents dotted the townsite.

She was born in Ireland in June, 1848, and married there on August 23, 1869, to John Murphy. They emigrated to the United States and for a time were in Anoka and St. Cloud before coming to Brainerd, where Mr. Murphy was employed up to ten years before his death as stationary engineer.

Mrs. Murphy was an old member of the St. Francis Catholic church, Brainerd, and the Catholic Ladies Foresters.

Surviving are five sons, Joseph, James, George, Edward and Dr. Harry E. Murphy, all of Brainerd; three daughters, Miss Bess Murphy, Brainerd; Mrs. E. L. Steiger, Minneapolis, and Mrs. James O'Keefe, Madison, Wis.

Funeral rites will be conducted on Monday morning from the St. Francis church.

"Cheyenne"

The greatest wild west show ever staged in Brainerd is scheduled for the Lyceum theatre, on Saturday when "Cheyenne," Ken Maynard's latest western picture arrives.

"Cheyenne" is a real honest-to-goodness western rodeo, with all the bucking bronchos, trick riding, stage coach races and other events that go to make these shows the most popular of all outdoor attractions.

A LAND POLICY NEEDED

THE state of Minnesota offers for sale this spring, in the nine counties comprising the Arrowhead association, 201,000 acres of state lands, of which 170,800 acres are lands listed as delinquent. That is, they were sold before and did not stay sold, says the Duluth News Tribune.

Here at Brainerd some 2,000 acres were offered for sale a few days ago and not a buyer appeared at the county auditor's office. The land is largely school land and remains after what has been the best has been picked over. Much of it is swamp land.

In 1924, says the Duluth paper, the state land office reported 1,850,000 acres of state land remaining unsold; in 1926, there was unsold 1,943,000 acres; in 1928, there was unsold 2,056,000 acres.

This year the list of state lands remaining unsold is increased by some figure of which the offer of 170,000 acres, now delinquent, is an index. As to a large part of this list, it is only fair to say that the offer to sell is merely a legal formality.

All over the United States, land under production is made to yield more while land that can't produce a profit under present conditions is going back to forest or waste. In the Arrowhead country, land is being cleared and occupied more rapidly than in any other section and land that is not working is reverting to wilderness as fast as the owners can let go.

The state as landlord is back where we were in 1916. Ten per cent of what the state then owned has been sold in the interval; 10 per cent of what the state then held has come back. As much came back as was sold in the intervening years.

Much of that, as the event proved, was land that would better not have been sold. The man who bought it couldn't keep it. Much of it was land that could not be made to pay under existing conditions.

This experience, and the fact that contracts for 170,000 acres of former sales are now in default, amplifies the lesson. The state needs a land policy; it needs a classification of its land. Sales should be encouraged in districts where conditions favor the settler and where roads and schools are already installed. Land that cannot be profitably occupied now or for some years to come should be set to work growing trees.

And so long as half or three-fourths of the land is still vacant in the best settled towns where conditions are all in favor of the settler, there is no need to press for the settlement of wilderness tracts where the settler's chance is last propitious.

GOVERNOR STARTS HIS SEASON OF SPEAKING

WITH the business of the legislative session now safely stowed away, Governor Theodore Christianson will again start on his usual season of speaking.

During the 90 day session of the legislature, speaking dates were kept at a minimum, but with the commencement period just ahead, the engagement list of the governor is assuming large proportions.

For the first time the governor will pay attention to demands of rural schools in the northern part of the state and his itinerary, to extend from May 26 through June 6, includes three rural school graduation programs in St. Louis county.

His commercent addresses include there: May 27 at Milaca high school; May 28 at Glenwood high school; May 29 at Wadena high school; May 30 a Memorial Day address at Bemidji and high school commencement in the evening; May 31 at Deer River high school; June 1 at International Falls high school; June 2 at the International convention of Young People's Luther League and Choral Union at Duluth; June 3 at Cook rural consolidated school; June 4 at Cotton rural consolidated school; June 5 at Floodwood rural consolidated school; June 6 at Mountain Iron high school.

During May he will also make addresses as follows: May 10 at the Spring Ceremonial of Aad Temple, Duluth; May 12 at Minnesota Conference of Augustana Synod, Center City; May 16 at Grand Chapter, Order of Eastern Star, at St. Paul; May 17 at 17th of May celebration of the Sons of Norway at St. Paul; May 20 at the dedication of the Lindbergh busts in St. Paul schools.

The office of governor held strenuous work in store for him during the session of the legislature, but this speaking itinerary is enough to tax any lecturer or Chautauqua speaker. It is only the governor's natural good health and vitality and enthusiasm that carries him through such a program. He very rarely refuses requests of the people and we in Brainerd especially remember the splendid address he made one evening during dedication week of the First Presbyterian church when he enthralled his large audience with his wonderful command of language and the beautiful imagery and graphic word pictures he used. He is a real inspiration.

THE Little Falls Transcript notes that "evidently the under cover men have been doing some work in Crow Wing county. After several arrests had been made for liquqor violations in the above county testimony brought out the fact that liquor had been sold to federal agents all during the month of April. A taxi driver in Brainerd was said to have 17 pints under one cushion of the car when arrested and his car confiscated. The agents are continuing their work in the territory according to St. Cloud advices, headquarters for a corps of the federal men."

THOSE unfriendly toward Andrew Mellon, says the Anoka Herald, are trying to oust him from the Cabinet under an old law which declares that a Secretary of the Treasury may not engage in "trade or commerce." Mr. Mellon owns stock in some corporations. If such a far-fetched construction be placed upon an antiquated law it will be difficult to find a secretary to qualify as any man of that calibre must have investments.

DRY agents at times experience difficulty in gaining evidence, but the idea of using high school girls as decoys is something to be condemned. Two Ohio agents were suspended after it was found Catherine Gunion, 18-year-old Lancaster, Ohio, high school girl had been used by them as a decoy to buy liquor at suspected places.

MINNESOTA produces a billion dollars worth of manufactured goods annually.

MINNESOTA has great livestock markets. Crow Wing county farmers ship much livestock to South St. Paul.

MINNESOTA leads the nation in potato production. Our seed potatoes are famous the world over.

Daphne by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

DAPHNE HAINES, seventeen and lovely, is literally driven from home by her nagging stepmother, whose sole interest is in her own daughter, Crystal. The second Mrs. Haines is determined that Crystal shall marry Ralph McKevitt, a handsome young man of wealth. Ralph, one day admires Daphne, whom he sees at a distance, and Mrs. Haines decides to permanently eliminate the younger girl, whose rivalry she secretly fears. She provokes a sordid quarrel in the household, and Daphne, realizing the helplessness of her position, leaves home to make her way in San Francisco. The quest for employment is difficult. She is almost starving when she encounters Ralph McKevitt, her stepsister's "prize" young man, in a cheap restaurant. He buys her a hearty meal and takes her home in his car. As weeks pass a nice friendship develops between them. Ralph secures a good position for the girl, and when he kisses her in the moonlight she feels she is in an earthly Paradise. The motley assortment of roomers at Daphne's house speculate "wisely" about her each time young McKevitt calls in his flashy car, but she finds two good friends in hard-boiled Flora McCardle and a love-starved little dressmaker called "Miss Viola." Back in the Haines home Crystal announces that she too is leaving for the city where she intends studying music. Daphne's father, brooding over the fate of his own girl, seems crushed and broken, but he is in mortal fear of his nagging wife. A stormy scene follows. Crystal's mother implores her not to leave, but she is determined to go. All the way on the bus to San Francisco her thoughts are strangely of Daphne.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XVII.

CRYSTAL had not thought of her step-sister for weeks. Not since she stood in the kitchen with the bulging straw suitcase in her hands, awkwardly saying goodbye.

"Funny she never came back. Who'd think she'd make a go of it in town, without money or friends, a green kid like that!"

She speculated upon it, while the bus sped along in the white, glaring sun. Sometimes she nodded, for the sun and the heat made her sleepy. Wonder where she's living . . . I might go in and see her sometime, poor kid . . . it's a good thing I've got everything fixed, I couldn't live like that. I wouldn't either, I'd find some man to pay the bills, and so could Daphne if she had any sense. . . .

Daphne. A vision of the little step-sister grew under her sleepy eyes. Daphne who looked like a Rossetti water color, ethereally, delicately seductive. Daphne who had changed from a long-legged, pale-faced school girl into a beauty over night . . .

A beauty . . . that was what Ralph McKevitt called her, the day he bumped into her in the yard last April . . .

Crystal was wide awake now. Her soft pink hands were clenched in her lap, the glittering nails dug into the flesh . . . Suppose they met again . . . Suppose Daphne were the reason for that new absentmindedness of his, his alibis for working nights . . .

"If I haven't the worst imagination! It's a curse! Of course, she hasn't been seeing him, he'd never run into her, and she'd never have the sense to look him up!" But even as she wiped her perspiring, aching hands on her handkerchief, and reached for the silver compact to powder her nose, the ugly suspicions came crowding back, sickening her, filling her with jealous fears. He did admire her, and she was crazy about him, the little fool, hadn't she cried into the dishpan for days after she met him?

"Oh my God!" she whispered, "if she cuts me out!"

The bus had stopped. "End of the line; everybody out!" the driver called. They were in San Francisco, she had sat there, not knowing it.

* * *

"Miss Crystal Garroty, Santa Clara." Crystal signed her name with a flourish in the register at the St. Francis, and tipped the bellhop a dollar.

The large, well-appointed room, with its glimpse of shining nickel and porcelain bath beyond, gave her a faint thrill of pleasure. She hadn't asked the price, and she didn't intend to. McKevitt would pay. She'd see to that.

She took some of the things out of the suitcase and arranged her silver toilet articles on the dresser. Maybe she'd stay a week; no hurry about getting an apartment.

"I ought to call him up and tell him I'm here," she thought, fingering the telephone book. No, I won't—I'll run out and see Avery first . . . I'll have a little fun before I let McKevitt get a mortgage on my life again!"

On the way out to Avery Woodward's shack in the artistic squalor of Telegraph Hill, her spirits soared, her tightly clenched hands relaxed. She forgot Daphne again. Forgot everything except that the taxi was bringing her to Avery, Avery for whom the rest of the world could go by.

He was reading in the fading light from the big, uncurtained window. A swarthy, delicate looking young man, with melancholy dark eyes, and long, very black hair receding from the temples in two deep, ever widening bays that promised early baldness.

He have no sign of surprise when she threw open the door and stood there, breathless and laughing.

"Avery you pig—you aren't even glad!"

He held out his arms, dropping the book. "So glad I have no words," he said, and she ran to him with a little sob.

When at last he released her she said shakily, "Well, you are a pig—making me do all the running. I'm going to quit it. You're the first man I ever did run after, and you're going to be the last. Everyone else runs after me!"

He smiled and lit his pipe. "I'm not like other men."

"No," she said stormily, "you aren't. I suppose that's why I fell for you. I don't know any other reason."

"How long can you stay?" he asked, ignoring her sudden flare of temper.

"Oh—as long as I want to," she answered coldly. She almost hated him sometimes. "What the devil do I see in him?" she asked herself angrily. "He's lazy, and he's untidy—he isn't even good looking or half way decent to me!" But love him or hate him, she couldn't forget him. She couldn't be happy without him now, and he, watching her with languid amusement, knew it.

"Then you will stay a long time. If I had known I would have prepared a feast. I would have swept the floor, and made my bed, and ordered good red wine from my friend Ghiraldi downstairs. I would have bought bread from the bakery, and salami from the grocery, and cheese. And butter. I would—but alas, I have no money!"

He emptied his pockets, smiling. "See, not a cent! On Sunday—with the banks closed."

"Avery, I believe you're always hungry," she said, exasperated.

"You decline my feast?"

She tossed him her small gold purse. "Oh well, you won't be good natured until you eat. Take it. We'll go somewhere, only no garlic, that's all I ask. I'll stand for anything else."

They walked arm in arm to the little Italian grocery down the hill, and came back loaded down with delicacies of Avery's choosing. The red wine went to Crystal's head. She closed her eyes and rested on his shoulder.

"I love you," he murmured, "I love you," his mouth close to hers.

The minutes lengthened into hou . . . happy . . . happy . . .

"Must go!" she mumbled dreamily.

"No, not yet—no so soon!"

"I've got to! I've got to get to Art School early, and see some people——"

"I can teach you more of art, and life and love. See—you haven't seen my new water colors. I must show you—look, love—the rain on the wet stones! Good? And this one—this little sketch of the hill——"

He was all interest, all tender enthusiasm now. And she thought, justifying nerself, "He can help me in my career—worth a whole lot more to me than Ralph's money!"

When, tired and still trembling with excitement, she reached the hotel, it was almost morning. Half of the money Ralph had loaned her was gone. She had loaned it to Avery.

"You big idiot!" she told herself, staring at her flushed, beautiful face in the brilliantly illuminated mirror. "You poor sap, throwing your money away!"

But she couldn't be sorry really, and there was still a hundred and fifty left.

"I'll call Ralph in the morning," she thought, "and let him know expenses will be more than I thought. I'll soon get him in the right mood . . ." She closed her eyes and sank back on the pillows, faintly smiling. Just before sleep came to her she had a really brilliant inspiration.

Cigarette Ads Defile Sentiment of Mother's Day

Mrs. E. M. Westfall, of Lodi, Calif., formerly a Brainerd resident for several years, sends the Dispatch the following communication.

An article from the Turlock Press has come to my notice, and as the sentiment quite appeals to be, I want to add a word in its favor. It seems that some action is being taken to suppress such cheap advertising as having the picture of a woman, the highest type of creation (supposedly so, at least), serve as a medium to advertise cigarettes not only for men, but for women as well. In the state of Washington a bill is before the legislature to do away with just such advertising and the question comes to me, how can anyone consistently present thoughts of "Mother's Day" when at the same time her picture is being used for such a purpose. Would it not be better to elevate rather than tear down the standards of "Motherhood?"

Respectfully,
MRS. E. M. WESTFALL.

Green fumes were wafted first through Solvay, and then across the lake to Liverpool.

Scores of workmen, choking from the deadly gas, hurried from the vicinity of the explosion. Emergency rescue crews were sent into the affected area to bring out those who had been overcome.

Assistance was sent from this city when word reached here of the seriousness of the blast.

Solvay is located on the southeast shore of Onondaga lake and Liverpool almost directly across. As the greenish cloud spread out like fog over the countryside, the residents of Solvay were warned and many left their homes, seeking high ground which was safe from the fumes.

A LAND POLICY NEEDED

THE state of Minnesota offers for sale this spring, in the nine counties comprising the Arrowhead association, 201,000 acres of state lands, of which 170,800 acres are lands listed as delinquent. That is, they were sold before and did not stay sold, says the Duluth News Tribune.

Here at Brainerd some 2,000 acres were offered for sale a few days ago and not a buyer appeared at the county auditor's office. The land is largely school land and remains after what has been the best has been picked over. Much of it is swamp land.

In 1924, says the Duluth paper, the state land office reported 1,850,000 acres of state land remaining unsold; in 1926, there was unsold 1,943,000 acres; in 1928, there was unsold 2,056,000 acres.

This year the list of state lands remaining unsold is increased by some figure of which the offer of 170,000 acres, now delinquent, is an index. As to a large part of this list, it is only fair to say that the offer to sell is merely a legal formality.

All over the United States, land under production is made to yield more while land that can't produce a profit under present conditions is going back to forest or waste. In the Arrowhead country, land is being cleared and occupied more rapidly than in any other section and land that is not working is reverting to wilderness as fast as the owners can let go.

The state as landlord is back where we were in 1916. Ten per cent of what the state then owned has been sold in the interval; 10 per cent of what the state then held has come back. As much came back as was sold in the intervening years.

Much of that, as the event proved, was land that would better not have been sold. The man who bought it couldn't keep it. Much of it was land that could not be made to pay under existing conditions.

This experience, and the fact that contracts for 170,000 acres of former sales are now in default, amplifies the lesson. The state needs a land policy; it needs a classification of its land. Sales should be encouraged in districts where conditions favor the settler and where roads and schools are already installed. Land that cannot be profitably occupied now or for some years to come should be set to work growing trees.

And so long as half or three-fourths of the land is still vacant in the best settled towns where conditions are all in favor of the settler, there is no need to press for the settlement of wilderness tracts where the settler's chance is last propitious.

GOVERNOR STARTS HIS SEASON OF SPEAKING

WITH the business of the legislative session now safely stowed away, Governor Theodore Christianson will again start on his usual season of speaking.

During the 90 day session of the legislature, speaking dates were kept at a minimum, but with the commencement period just ahead, the engagement list of the governor is assuming large proportions.

For the first time the governor will pay attention to demands of rural schools in the northern part of the state and his itinerary, to extend from May 26 through June 6, includes three rural school graduation programs in St. Louis county.

His commercent addresses include there: May 27 at Milaca high school; May 28 at Glenwood high school; May 29 at Wadena high school; May 30 a Memorial Day address at Bemidji and high school commencement in the evening; May 31 at Deer River high school; June 1 at International Falls high school; June 2 at the International convention of Young People's Luther League and Choral Union at Duluth; June 3 at Cook rural consolidated school; June 4 at Cotton rural consolidated school; June 5 at Floodwood rural consolidated school; June 6 at Mountain Iron high school.

During May he will also make addresses as follows: May 10 at the Spring Ceremonial of Aad Temple, Duluth; May 12 at Minnesota Conference of Augustana Synod, Center City; May 16 at Grand Chapter, Order of Eastern Star, at St. Paul; May 17 at 17th of May celebration of the Sons of Norway at St. Paul; May 20 at the dedication of the Lindbergh busts in St. Paul schools.

The office of governor held strenuous work in store for him during the session of the legislature, but this speaking itinerary is enough to tax any lecturer or Chautauqua speaker. It is only the governor's natural good health and vitality and enthusiasm that carries him through such a program. He very rarely refuses requests of the people and we in Brainerd especially remember the splendid address he made one evening during dedication week of the First Presbyterian church when he enthralled his large audience with his wonderful command of language and the beautiful imagery and graphic word pictures he used. He is a real inspiration.

THE Little Falls Transcript notes that "evidently the under cover men have been doing some work in Crow Wing county. After several arrests had been made for liquqor violations in the above county testimony brought out the fact that liquor had been sold to federal agents all during the month of April. A taxi driver in Brainerd was said to have 17 pints under one cushion of the car when arrested and his car confiscated. The agents are continuing their work in the territory according to St. Cloud advices, headquarters for a corps of the federal men."

THOSE unfriendly toward Andrew Mellon, says the Anoka Herald, are trying to oust him from the Cabinet under an old law which declares that a Secretary of the Treasury may not engage in "trade or commerce." Mr. Mellon owns stock in some corporations. If such a far-fetched construction be placed upon an antiquated law it will be difficult to find a secretary to qualify as any man of that calibre must have investments.

DRY agents at times experience difficulty in gaining evidence, but the idea of using high school girls as decoys is something to be condemned. Two Ohio agents were suspended after it was found Catherine Gunion, 18-year-old Lancaster, Ohio, high school girl had been used by them as a decoy to buy liquor at suspected places.

MINNESOTA produces a billion dollars worth of manufactured goods annually.

MINNESOTA has great livestock markets. Crow Wing county farmers ship much livestock to South St. Paul.

MINNESOTA leads the nation in potato production. Our seed potatoes are famous the world over.

Daphne by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

DAPHNE HAINES, seventeen and lovely, is literally driven from home by her nagging stepmother, whose sole interest is in her own daughter, Crystal. The second Mrs. Haines is determined that Crystal shall marry Ralph McKevitt, a handsome young man of wealth. Ralph, one day admires Daphne, whom he sees at a distance, and Mrs. Haines decides to permanently eliminate the younger girl, whose rivalry she secretly fears. She provokes a sordid quarrel in the household, and Daphne, realizing the helplessness of her position, leaves home to make her way in San Francisco. The quest for employment is difficult. She is almost starving when she encounters Ralph McKevitt, her stepsister's "prize" young man, in a cheap restaurant. He buys her a hearty meal and takes her home in his car. As weeks pass a nice friendship develops between them. Ralph secures a good position for the girl, and when he kisses her in the moonlight she feels she is in an earthly Paradise. The motley assortment of roomers at Daphne's house speculate "wisely" about her each time young McKevitt calls in his flashy car, but she finds two good friends in hard-boiled Flora McCardle and a love-starved little dressmaker called "Miss Viola." Back in the Haines home Crystal announces that she too is leaving for the city where she intends studying music. Daphne's father, brooding over the fate of his own girl, seems crushed and broken, but he is in mortal fear of his nagging wife. A stormy scene follows. Crystal's mother implores her not to leave, but she is determined to go. All the way on the bus to San Francisco her thoughts are strangely of Daphne.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XVII.

CRYSTAL had not thought of her step-sister for weeks. Not since she stood in the kitchen with the bulging straw suitcase in her hands, awkwardly saying goodbye.

"Funny she never came back. Who'd think she'd make a go of it in town, without money or friends, a green kid like that!"

She speculated upon it, while the bus sped along in the white, glaring sun. Sometimes she nodded, for the sun and the heat made her sleepy. Wonder where she's living . . . I might go in and see her sometime, poor kid . . . it's a good thing I've got everything fixed, I couldn't live like that. I wouldn't either, I'd find some man to pay the bills, and so could Daphne if she had any sense. . . .

Daphne. A vision of the little step-sister grew under her sleepy eyes. Daphne who looked like a Rossetti water color, ethereally, delicately seductive. Daphne who had changed from a long-legged, pale-faced school girl into a beauty over night . . .

A beauty . . . that was what Ralph McKevitt called her, the day he bumped into her in the yard last April . . .

Crystal was wide awake now. Her soft pink hands were clenched in her lap, the glittering nails dug into the flesh . . . Suppose they met again . . . Suppose Daphne were the reason for that new absentmindedness of his, his alibis for working nights . . .

"If I haven't the worst imagination! It's a curse! Of course, she hasn't been seeing him, he'd never run into her, and she'd never have the sense to look him up!" But even as she wiped her perspiring, aching hands on her handkerchief, and reached for the silver compact to powder her nose, the ugly suspicions came crowding back, sickening her, filling her with jealous fears. He did admire her, and she was crazy about him, the little fool, hadn't she cried into the dish-pan for days after she met him?

"Oh my God!" she whispered, "if she cuts me out!"

The bus had stopped. "End of the line; everybody out!" the driver called. They were in San Francisco, she had sat there, not knowing it.

* * *

"Miss Crystal Garroty, Santa Clara." Crystal signed her name with a flourish in the register at the St. Francis, and tipped the bellhop a dollar.

The large, well-appointed room, with its glimpse of shining nickel and porcelain bath beyond, gave her a faint thrill of pleasure. She hadn't asked the price, and she didn't intend to. McKevitt would pay. She'd see to that.

She took some of the things out of the suitcase and arranged her silver toilet articles on the dresser. Maybe she'd stay a week; no hurry about getting an apartment.

"I ought to call him up and tell him I'm here," she thought, fingering the telephone book. No, I won't—I'll run out and see Avery first . . . I'll have a little fun before I let McKevitt get a mortgage on my life again!"

On the way out to Avery Woodward's shack in the artistic squalor of Telegraph Hill, her spirits soared, her tightly clenched hands relaxed. She forgot Daphne again. Forgot everything except that the taxi was bringing her to Avery, Avery for whom the rest of the world could go by.

He was reading in the fading light from the big, uncurtained window. A swarthy, delicate looking young man, with melancholy dark eyes, and long, very black hair receding from the temples in two deep, ever widening bays that promised early baldness.

He have no sign of surprise when she threw open the door and stood there, breathless and laughing.

"Avery you pig—you aren't even glad!"

He held out his arms, dropping the book. "So glad I have no words," he said, and she ran to him with a little sob.

When at last he released her she said shakily, "Well, you are a pig—making me do all the running. I'm going to quit it. You're the first man I ever did run after, and you're going to be the last. Everyone else runs after me!"

He smiled and lit his pipe. "I'm not like other men."

"No," she said stormily, "you aren't. I suppose that's why I fell for you. I don't know any other reason."

"How long can you stay?" he asked, ignoring her sudden flare of temper.

"Oh—as long as I want to," she answered coldly. She almost hated him sometimes. "What the devil do I see in him?" she asked herself angrily. "He's lazy, and he's untidy—he isn't even good looking or half way decent to me!" But love him or hate him, she couldn't forget him. She couldn't be happy without him now, and he, watching her with languid amusement, knew it.

"Then you will stay a long time. If I had known I would have prepared a feast. I would have swept the floor, and made my bed, and ordered good red wine from my friend Ghiraldi downstairs. I would have bought bread from the bakery, and salami from the grocery, and cheese. And butter. I would—but alas, I have no money!"

He emptied his pockets, smiling. "See, not a cent! On Sunday—with the banks closed."

"Avery, I believe you're always hungry," she said, exasperated.

"You decline my feast?"

She tossed him her small gold purse. "Oh well, you won't be good natured until you eat. Take it. We'll go somewhere, only no garlic, that's all I ask. I'll stand for anything else."

They walked arm in arm to the little Italian grocery down the hill, and came back loaded down with delicacies of Avery's choosing. The red wine went to Crystal's head. She closed her eyes and rested on his shoulder.

"I love you," he murmured, "I love you," his mouth close to hers.

The minutes lengthened into hou . . . happy . . . happy . . .

"Must go!" she mumbled dreamily.

"No, not yet—no so soon!"

"I've got to! I've got to get to Art School early, and see some people——"

"I can teach you more of art, and life and love. See—you haven't seen my new water colors. I must show you—look, love—the rain on the wet stones! Good? And this one—this little sketch of the hill——"

"I'll call Ralph in the morning," she thought, "and let him know expenses will be more than I thought. I'll soon get him in the right mood . . ." She closed her eyes and sank back on the pillows, faintly smiling. Just before sleep came to her she had a really brilliant inspiration.

Green fumes were wafted first through Solvay, and then across the lake to Liverpool.

Scores of workmen, choking from the deadly gas, hurried from the vicinity of the explosion. Emergency rescue crews were sent into the affected area to bring out those who had been overcome.

Assistance was sent from this city when word reached here of the seriousness of the blast.

Solvay is located on the southeast shore of Onondaga lake and Liverpool almost directly across. As the greenish cloud spread out like fog over the countryside, the residents of Solvay were warned and many left their homes, seeking high ground which was safe from the fumes.

HAGEN WINS BRITISH OPEN GOLF PLAY FOR FOURTH TIME

HIS CONTENDERS GO TO PIECES IN HEAVY GALE

CHAMPION PLAYS TWO STEADY ROUNDS IN BAD WEATHER CONDITIONS

OPPOSITION LOST HEART SURVEYING 67 MADE DAY BEFORE BY CHAMPION

By ARCH RODGERS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Muirfield, Scotland, May 10. — Walter Hagen won the British open golf championship for the fourth time here today.

Johnny Farrell, open champion of the United State, won second money, finishing six strokes behind "the Haig" with an aggregate of 298.

Farrell gained second placed with four rounds of 72-75-76-75, considerably better than par golf for the championship Muirfield course.

While a gale swept the moors and the other contenders went to pieces, the champion played two steady rounds to gain an aggregate of 292, which left him far out alone in front of the field.

There was nothing spectacular about the finish of this championship except the havoc wrought by the wind sweeping in from the North Sea across Muirfield's rolling dunes.

The other contenders seemed to have lost heart in the face of the devastating 67 tossed at them by "Sir Walter" the day before, and it only remained for Leo Diegel, mercurial P. G. A. champion, to blow up and leave the championship to Hagen.

Diegel did so early in the day, taking an 82 for his third round and falling far behind.

The gale which swept the course made low scoring difficult, but none of the champion's rivals seemed to have a real good round in his system today.

Hagen won the championship with rounds of 75-67-75-75, about twelve strokes under the estimated par for Muirfield.

This championship is the fourth British open for Walter. He won first at Sandwich in 1922, at Hoylake in 1924, and again at Sandwich last year. He had the same aggregate—292 — in last year's tournament.

Muirfield, Scotland, May 10. — Walter Hagen seemed certain to win his fourth British open championship today as the field of 64 survivors set out on the fourth and final round.

The champion had an aggregate of 217 strokes for the first three rounds, his 75 today being achieved in the face of tremendous difficulties. A 40-mile gale blew the balls about, setting them rolling on the greens and making play through the fairways extremely hazardous.

Experts declared Hagen's 75 today was quite as good golf as his 67 of yesterday.

Hagen practically clinched the championship when he went out in 36 on his final round. With anything like par figures for the final nine, Walter had the title in his pocket.

Leo Diegel, White Plains pro who led by two strokes at the end of 36 holes, blew up today. The American P. G. A. champion was ten over fours, shooting a disastrous 82 for an aggregate of 222, which left him five strokes behind Hagen.

One by one, the other entries within striking distance of Hagen cracked under the strain of the concluding rounds of the championship and the difficulties of negotiating the sea-side moors during a gale such as today's.

Abe Mitchell, upon whose broad shoulders the British had pinned most of their hopes for recovery of the title, needed a 78 for an aggregate of 222.

Percy Alliss, who had led the field in the first round, shot a 76, to total 221 at the end of 54 holes.

Little Gene Sarazen, who was not far behind at the half-way mark, took 81 to get around this morning and had an aggregate of 228, which put him out of the running.

The field played 36 holes today, the low aggregate for 72 holes, including Wednesday's and Thursday's rounds winning the championship.

Leo Diegel, pace-maker at the half-way mark, and Hagen, who was out early, had this advantage over the others. They were surrounded by large galleries, and the spectators broke the force of the wind around the greens and made putting a little easier.

Sarazen was protected by practically no gallery whatever, as he was the first to start, and the half gale played havoc with his shots.

Bobby Cruikshank, another American who was close up at the end of the first two rounds, tossed his chances to the winds of the North Sea when he took 78 for an aggregate of 225.

Horton Smith, the Joplin, Mo., youngster, from whom much had been expected in this British open, had an 84 today, and a three-round total of 236.

Hagen refused to be disturbed by the wind, sinking a 25-foot putt on the first green just to start the day right. He was as cool and unconcerned as though playing a practice round.

"Wild Bill" Mehlhorn faded early from the picture, taking 42-42—84 for an aggregate of 232.

When the play of some of the American professionals was observed, the high quality of Hagen's golf became more apparent.

George Von Elms, the lone American amateur, who eased into the final day's play by virtue of a tie for last place at the half way mark, also needed 84 for his third round. His aggregate was 241.

Johnny Farrell, American open champion, continued to improve his position. Farrell had a 76 today, his aggregate of 223 for 54 holes being one of the best.

Watching the Scoreboard

Yesterday's Hero—Tony Lazzeri, whose home run with two men on base in the sixth inning at St. Louis counted what proved to be the winning runs and enabled the Yankese to remain at the head of the American league for at least another 24 hours. The score was 7 to 3.

The Philadelphia Athletics remained a half game behind the Yankees, checking Chicago's White Sox in that city, 9 to 2. Earnshaw, Athletic hurler, was touched for 10 hits but the Sox were not able to bunch them.

Washington climbed out of the American league cellar with a 6 to 3 victory over the Tigers at Detroit. Four Detroit errors helped Walter Johnson's men clinch the verdict.

St. Louis pushed the Boston Braves down another notch into third place by trimming them, 5 to 1, at Boston.

Cincinnati snapped the three game winning streak of the Phillies with a 7 to 5 win at Philadelphia, advancing to seventh place through the feat.

Watching the Scoreboard

Yesterday's Hero—Tony Lazzeri, whose home run with two men on base in the sixth inning at St. Louis counted what proved to be the winning runs and enabled the Yankese to remain at the head of the American league for at least another 24 hours. The score was 7 to 3.

The Philadelphia Athletics remained a half game behind the Yankees, checking Chicago's White Sox in that city, 9 to 2. Earnshaw, Athletic hurler, was touched for 10 hits but the Sox were not able to bunch them.

Washington climbed out of the American league cellar with a 6 to 3 victory over the Tigers at Detroit. Four Detroit errors helped Walter Johnson's men clinch the verdict.

St. Louis pushed the Boston Braves down another notch into third place by trimming them, 5 to 1, at Boston.

Cincinnati snapped the three game winning streak of the Phillies with a 7 to 5 win at Philadelphia, advancing to seventh place through the feat.

Here's the Best Way to Put in Fence Posts

DRIVE Red Top Steel Fence Posts at the rate of 200 to 300 a day with the Red Top One Man Post Driver and without a helper. A quick, easy job and the least expensive way to get a fence post into the ground.

The Red Top enables you to do in a day the same amount of fencing that used to take a week. At this rapid rate it will not take you long to put your present fences in good shape and put up the new ones you've been wanting.

Every Red Top you drive is just another step in the direction of trouble-proof permanent fences. Red Tops are made extra strong to withstand the hardest shocks and strains. They drive straight and are held firmly in the ground. Fencing is easily attached by one man with the Handy Fasteners that come free with Red Top Studded Posts. Once attached the fence wire cannot work loose. Constant restapling, re-stretching, and repair become unnecessary. The Red Top is a good looking post. The Aluminum metallic finish adds to both the attractiveness and life of your fences.

We like to sell Red Tops because the first order always means a satisfied customer and repeat business. Our sales on these posts grow bigger every year which is proof of the superiority of Red Top. Prices are mighty reasonable now. We recommend early buying.

After running the boat over the lake for several hours he stopped the motor to adjust it. The motor started, pulling the steering lever out of his hand and throwing him out backwards into the water. His hand was dressed as soon as he was brought to shore and he was then taken to the hospital. His hand was X-rayed this morning.

Lester Bredenberg had a similar experience last fall on a small lake near Gull lake. He was was thrown out and his motor continued to run turning the boat in a circle. It circled in the lake for about an hour and a half before it finally came to shore. He was not injured.

Quite a few others from Brainerd had the same experience last summer, but Mr. White is the first to be injured in such a manner.

Such greasy hands!

Hard water won't clean them

HARD water can't do much with greasy hands. Of course, you use lots of soap. You try to get a thick lather. But the water is too hard; it combines with the soap and forms a scum. How can you expect to clean greasy hands in that water?

There is a way. Use Melo. Sprinkle a little in the basin. Water softened with Melo makes a wonderful cleaner, with or without soap. Soft water and soap and lots of lather; grease won't stay long on your hands. Get a can of Melo at your grocer's today.

Have Definite Purpose

Every-day folks may lack the element of greatness that is necessary for great world movements, but how much better it is to choose a purpose within one's powers and accomplish it than it is to drift down the river of Life, arriving nowhere and doing nothing.—Exchange

Such greasy hands!

Hard water won't clean them

HARD water can't do much with greasy hands. Of course, you use lots of soap. You try to get a thick lather. But the water is too hard; it combines with the soap and forms a scum. How can you expect to clean greasy hands in that water?

There is a way. Use Melo. Sprinkle a little in the basin. Water softened with Melo makes a wonderful cleaner, with or without soap. Soft water and soap and lots of lather; grease won't stay long on your hands. Get a can of Melo at your grocer's today.

No further individual invitation will be sent out other than this public announcement.

The Brainerd District Boy Scout Roundup was run off last Saturday night at the Lum Park pavilion in spite of the cold weather that made the place seem like it was located at the north pole. The troop committees of the winning troops are especially urged to provide means for the scouts to get down to St. Cloud. All scouts should plan to be in St. Cloud in time for the parade commencing at 7 P. M. If you plan on staying for the scout field day Saturday, May 11, your troop should plan to stay over night at the camping grounds provided for the Roundup Scouts. Each troop staying over night brings their own tenting and food, and an adult leader. If your leader cannot go report the same to the scout office before the event. An invitation is extended to all parents and friends interested in scouting to be present to see the best of scouting in the area.

American Watches Are More Accurate

What, after all, is a watch for . . . but timekeeping? And of what use is timetimekeeping? And of what use is timecuracy and has to say, "What time have you? I think I'm a little slow." For generations, the fine, old American names of Elgin, Hamilton, Waltham, Howard, have stood for undeviating accuracy in time. They still do. No watch has ever come to America's shores that matched for accuracy the American-made watch. Let us show you a few of these triumphs of American genius.

True style that reflects the mode . . . yet dares to be different . . .

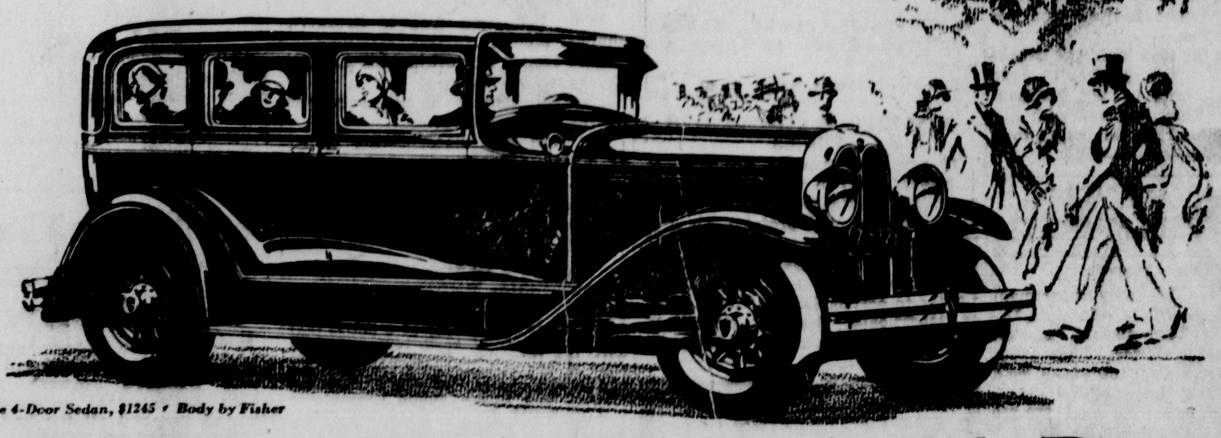

Fisher designers created beautiful bodies for the New Oakland All-American Six. Long and low and rakish in outline . . . as the bodies of fine cars are expected to be. Oakland designers matched these Fisher bodies with sweeping hood and cowl lines . . . with flaring one-piece fenders . . . creating a harmony of contour and a motor car style that reflects the mode, yet dares to be different.

In the distinctive appearance of its radiator . . . in the attractive simplicity of its rear view . . . in its wide range of smart, new colors . . . the New All-American differs from ordinary motor car styles. And in its interiors is further evidence that Oakland has created its own original style.

We are now making a special demonstration designed to bring home to motorists the extraordinary value provided by the New Oakland All-American Six. If you are planning to buy a car we want you to enjoy this demonstration . . . if only for the purpose of learning what Oakland offers for its surprisingly moderate price.

Prices $1145 to $1375, f. o. b. Pontiac, Mich., plus delivery charges. Spring covers and Lovejoy Hydraulic Shock Absorbers included in list prices. Bumpers and rear fender guards extra. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

Consider the delivered price as well as the list price when comparing automobile values . . . Oakland-Pontiac delivered prices include only reasonable charges for delivery and financing.

Fisher designers created beautiful bodies for the New Oakland All-American Six. Long and low and rakish in outline . . . as the bodies of fine cars are expected to be. Oakland designers matched these Fisher bodies with sweeping hood and cowl lines . . . with flaring one-piece fenders . . . creating a harmony of contour and a motor car style that reflects the mode, yet dares to be different.

In the distinctive appearance of its radiator . . . in the attractive simplicity of its rear view . . . in its wide range of smart, new colors . . . the New All-American differs from ordinary motor car styles. And in its interiors is further evidence that Oakland has created its own original style.

We are now making a special demonstration designed to bring home to motorists the extraordinary value provided by the New Oakland All-American Six. If you are planning to buy a car we want you to enjoy this demonstration . . . if only for the purpose of learning what Oakland offers for its surprisingly moderate price.

Prices $1145 to $1375, f. o. b. Pontiac, Mich., plus delivery charges. Spring covers and Lovejoy Hydraulic Shock Absorbers included in list prices. Bumpers and rear fender guards extra. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

Consider the delivered price as well as the list price when comparing automobile values . . . Oakland-Pontiac delivered prices include only reasonable charges for delivery and financing.

CITY BASEBALL LEAGUE MEETING CALLED TONIGHT

OFFICIALS TO GATHER AT Y. M. C. A. FOR FINAL PREPARATIONS

FIRST GAME TO BE PLAYED ON ROSKO BROTHERS' NEW FIELD

Officials of the City Baseball League will meet at 8 o'clock tonight in the committee room at the Y. M. C. A. for the final meeting previous to the opening of the league. Opening date for the league some time next week will be announced tomorrow. Details as to opening of the league will be worked out at tonight's meeting.

The municipal grounds not being ready for use, the first game is to be played on a newly laid out diamond at Rosko's aviation field. Considerable time is being spent by the Rosko Brothers in leveling off additional ground for the airport and a section of this ground is to be set aside for an athletic field.

The possibility of a fourth team in the league is to be considered at tonight's meeting. A new team of young men who have not played in the city league before as individuals are applying for entrance tonight.

"Mother's Day"

"So here's to the white carnation,
Wear it on Mother's Day;
Flower that blooms for mother,
Winsome, gallant and gay.
Flower of perfect sweetness,
Flower for hut and hall,
Here's to the white carnation
And to mother—our best of all."

CITY BASEBALL LEAGUE MEETING CALLED TONIGHT

OFFICIALS TO GATHER AT Y. M. C. A. FOR FINAL PREPARATIONS

FIRST GAME TO BE PLAYED ON ROSKO BROTHERS' NEW FIELD

Officials of the City Baseball League will meet at 8 o'clock tonight in the committee room at the Y. M. C. A. for the final meeting previous to the opening of the league. Opening date for the league some time next week will be announced tomorrow. Details as to opening of the league will be worked out at tonight's meeting.

The municipal grounds not being ready for use, the first game is to be played on a newly laid out diamond at Rosko's aviation field. Considerable time is being spent by the Rosko Brothers in leveling off additional ground for the airport and a section of this ground is to be set aside for an athletic field.

The possibility of a fourth team in the league is to be considered at tonight's meeting. A new team of young men who have not played in the city league before as individuals are applying for entrance tonight.

"So here's to the white carnation,
Wear it on Mother's Day;

Winsome, gallant and gay.
Flower of perfect sweetness,
Flower for hut and hall,
Here's to the white carnation
And to mother—our best of all."
